

Móz Metals Make Waves at Moana Pacific

Moana Pacific is a twin tower condo located in Honolulu, Hawaii. Built in 2007, the complex accommodates 720 units with floor-to-ceiling windows that provide sweeping views of the ocean and city skyline.

After 8 years of wear and tear, Moana Pacific decided to update their two lobby interiors with a new design inspired by the local Hawaiian islands. The interior architect hired Móz in August 2015 to help design feature walls that aligned with the building's high-end aesthetic. The goal for the feature walls was to create an oceanic backdrop that would serve as the focal point for the entire lobby lounge.

Móz manufactured Dimensional Walls in blended shades of blue, tan, and white digitally printed on solid-core aluminum metal. The surface was made by weaving modular panels into a three-dimensional horizontal pattern, creating a sense of movement similar to ocean waves. The material offered the opportunity to add color, depth, and texture to the lobby walls of the Moana Pacific.

In addition to the feature walls, the Móz team suggested adding four column covers to the Moana Pacific lobby design. The addition would complement the metallic walls and transform the basic structural elements into decorative metal accents. To cover the 16'H x 6'Dia columns, designers selected Clear aluminum with a Fog grain to soften the metallic finish with a muted texture.

The Tides dimensional wall series and decorative metal column covers offered easy-to-install solutions, long-term durability, and affordable pricing for this large-scale hospitality project. Moana Pacific asked for specific shades of blues and metallics to mirror the building's branding while connecting the lobby interiors to the exterior surroundings. Móz offered custom design and fabrication services to meet Moana Pacific's unique design needs.

The final effect was a flowing and subtly reflecting seascape that swept across the expanse of the lobby lounge, serving as both a wall feature and work of art.
